UW-Waukesha now has a book club open to all. The first meeting is Thursday Feb. 13, from 1–1:50pm, in C101. The current book being read is What Makes Love Last. Join them for an interesting discussion.

“The worst stab wound is the one to the heart. Sure, most people survive it, but the heart is never quite the same. There’s always a scar, which I guess, is meant to remind you that even for a little while, someone made your heart beat faster. And that’s a scar you can live with, proudly. All the days of your life.” Augustus Hill

Books Your Professor Wrote

Instead of your Professors reading what YOU wrote, how about reading what your professors wrote? Here are just a few of the current books written/edited by UW-Waukesha Faculty that can be found in our library. Ask at the circulation desk.

- Homer Simpson Ponders Politics edited by Prof. Joseph Foy with chapters by Foy and Prof. Dean Kowalski
- American Sports Fiction with a chapter by Prof. Greg Ahrenhoerster
- Moral Theory at the Movies by Prof. Dean A. Kowalski
- Jeopardy! And Philosophy with a chapter by Prof. Joseph Foy

If you haven’t seen the new furniture in the Commons, you should check it out. It is beautiful! But, if it gets a bit loud in the Commons, don’t forget the Library has a great group study room and Quiet Study Only in the rest of the library.

Love is Louder when YOU make a difference

February 12@ noon, in the HUB

Stop by for a smile and a cookie!

Simple things you can do to make someone’s day:

1. Hold the door
2. Say “Thank you”
3. Smile
4. Say “Hello”

How many of these have you done today?
