Other than the typical library offerings, we also have this!

What “ON RESERVE” means in the library

Many times a professor will tell you that they have put something “On Reserve” in the library. That means instead of having you purchase the book or DVD, they will put that item “On Reserve” in the library. Just stop at the circulation desk, tell us the professor’s name, class and title of the item, and we will check it out to you. You need to show us your student ID or driver’s license. Checkouts are usually for 2 hours.

Group Study and Collaboration Room L112 in the library.

The library has a group study room for students who would like to collaborate on projects. The room comes equipped with two computer stations with large screens. Personal laptops also can connect. A large whiteboard is available for group work.
